Neuropsychiatry aspects in space

Dr. Eduardo Rodriguez

I am a psychiatry registrar from The Royal Australian and New Zealand College of Psychiatrists.

I studied two bachelors simultaneously. Medical surgeon graduated from the National University and Economist from La Salle University. My passion has been neurosciences and space science.

After being a director of management and development of Saint John of God Health (the largest Health business in Colombia), I decided to pursue my dreams in space science and psychiatry.

I completed a Master in Space Studies at The International Space University in France and got my Pilot licence.

I am a former scholar-researcher at NASA AMES, working at the Fatigue Countermeasures Laboratory. Also, I was selected from the International Institute for Astronautical Science in The USA to become a Scientist astronaut. Additionally, I have been an astronaut safety health chief in a Mars Analog Mission.

My areas of research interests are fatigue, sleep studies, and neuropsychiatry aspects in space, analog missions, parabolic flight, & extreme human activities.
Dr Cassidy is Psychiatrist and medical graduate of University of Sydney. He is a Fellow of the Royal Australian and New Zealand College of Psychiatrists, a member of the RANZCP Faculty of Forensic Psychiatrists and member of the RANZCP Section of ECT and Neurostimulation.

Dr Cassidy founded and operated The Hills Clinic hospital and Medical centre group. Dr Cassidy drove the development and operation of The Hills Clinic Hospital in Kellyville which was the first purpose built psychiatric Hospital in New South Wales. He was the Medical Director of The Hills Clinic between 2004 and 2017.

Dr Cassidy has spent the last 15 years developing convenient and accessible mental health services. The programs that Dr Cassidy founded and operated have treated more than 10,000 patients throughout North Western Sydney.

Dr Cassidy understands the drivers of sustainability in Mental Health services. In the services Dr Cassidy has been involved with he has always worked cooperatively with key stakeholders including patients, carers, referrers, staff and health insurers.

Dr Cassidy is active in the promotion of innovative new treatments for Depression in the media and to the general public.

Dr Cassidy cofounded TMS Clinics Australia in 2015 with Professor Paul Fitzgerald.
Dr Bridget Johnson is embarking on her third year as a RANZCP psychiatry registrar in 2019. She started as RANZCP psychiatry registrar in 2019. She started as an intern with a keen interest in mental health at the Royal Brisbane and Women's Hospital in 2016 and launched straight into psychiatry training at the Redcliffe-Caboolture Mental Health Service the following year, where she's been since. Bridget has been an avid participant in discussions around service delivery and improvement and, in 2018, has taken on the challenge of re-designing the psychiatry registrar after-hours roster with a view to continued quality-improvement and a focus on service delivery and registrar wellbeing.

Dr Sunanda Ghosh is a Child and Adolescent Psychiatrist who worked as a Consultant Child Psychiatrist in UK for five years before moving to Australia in 2014.

Having worked in community outpatient teams, adolescent inpatient units including specialist eating disorder unit, learning disability services and crisis management teams, he is passionate about providing a holistic and recovery focused approach to treatment, involving the young person as well as their family and guardians. He is therefore actively interested in ensuring that local services are responsive and designed with a view to keep up with changes in the population.

Additionally, he is interested in training trainee psychiatrists, and is an author of "Conquer CASC, Adapt and Pass!: A guide to passing psychiatric clinical examinations". He has held the post of National representative for C&A Psychiatry Advanced trainees for Royal College of Psychiatrists, UK, and is currently a Committee member for RANZCP's Overseas Trained Psychiatrist Committee. He is also a blogger with an interest in photography and video games.
